

Anybody Hear That Flushing Sound?

Friday, 06 May 2011 17:27

Your Sunday night might not be all that peaceful in La Crosse this week-end. The city's water department begins its annual spring hydrant flushing on Sunday night around ten. The flushing helps move mineral sediments out of the city water lines. It's not a quiet process. Water spewing out of the hydrants, diesel trucks idling, yellow flashing lights. The flushing will continue through Thursday. On Sunday, crews will be concentrating on an area between the marsh and King street.
