

City Accepting Some Post-Tornado Building Debris

City crews continue to pick up fallen tree debris after Sunday's storm. But they've also moved on to collecting wreckage from buildings as well. The city of La Crosse says it will be picking up limited amounts of storm-damaged building materials like siding, insulation and shingles but only from the storm damage areas. Crews will be picking up those piles--no bigger than four feet in any direction--curbside. But they won't collect if there's regular household garbage or tree debris mixed in.
