

Among the myriad of park improvement projects in the works for the city of La Crosse is one that could involve another nation. The Ho-Chunk is looking to get involved with the city in a rebuild of the northside's Red Cloud park. Parks chief Steve Carlyon says the park will tell a story once it's all done, showing park visitors how the Ho-Chunk lived 300 to 500 years ago.

Carlyon is also pushing forward with plans to expand the Black River Beach Neighborhood Center as well as Copeland Park. Meanwhile, a $1.7 million revamp of Grandad Bluff park is well underway.