

The winter will come and go in La Crosse without the American flag sailing stiff breezes from atop Grandad Bluff. City park and rec boss Steve Carlyon says, because the park is a construction site, he's got "no way" to get city workers to the flag pole to hoist the Stars and Stripes. It's a construction site, he says.

The park facelift was to be complete in November but has pushed back until spring due to some problems with availability of materials and some issues with underground springs.
