

Even at age 70....seems like some people just don't learn. That's the age of a Black River Falls man who is now facing his ninth drunken driving offense.

Doug Flick was arrested late last week after he was accused of speeding in the town of Brockway. Police say he had an alcohol level of .15. That's nearly double the legal limit of .08 but almost eight times the .02 restriction he had because of his prior operating while intoxicated convictions.

Flick initially told police he had two drinks but later stated it was five. Flick is being held on a $5,000 cash bond. Flick racked up his previous eight drunken driving offenses over a span that dates back to 1991.
