

At a press conference held at Winona State University this morning, The National Child Protection Training Center and Gundersen Health System announced the organizations had signed a letter of intent for NCPTC to become part of Gundersen Health System. Executive Director, Victor Vieth, says they now have all of the pieces of the puzzle together to move forward into the future.

\(Click for Audio\)

The NCPTC headquarters and training site will remain on the Winona State University Campus, and the university will continue to collaborate with the NCPTC on programming and curriculum. It all starts in 2013.