

The former Wisconsin Election Board was made up of political appointees from both parties, from legislative leaders and from the governor. Incoming Senate Majority Leader Scott Fitzgerald wants it to go back to that form. Democrat Steve Doyle doesn't. The La Crosse State Rep. tells us that if aint's broke...don't fix it.

\(Click for Audio\)

Doyle adds that moving back to the Elections Board would not be good for the public. And Governor Scott Walker was not too giddy about making changes either saying it's not his top priority.