

Governor Scott Walker continues to push for a bill that would streamline the mining permitting process, saying it could bring up to 3 thousand jobs to Wisconsin. It's something he drove home during his State of the State address as well as during his tour stop in La Crosse. But Senator, Jennifer Shilling says we need jobs today....not tomorrow.

\(Click for Audio\)

Walker stated that if there's any state in America that should be able to move forward with the process of streamlining safe and environmentally sound mining it certainly should be the Badger State. Shilling says that's not today...and that's not good enough.