

UWL Student Found Dead After Disappearing In Onalaska

Monday, 18 February 2013 09:21

It has happened again. Another young college student has been found dead, apparently after a night of excessive drinking. 23 year old Neala Frye was last seen Saturday night at the Spillway Pub in Onalaska. She was supposed to meet up with friends later in the evening, but failed to show up. Friends and family began searching for her when she failed to show up to work at Menards on Sunday morning. Her body was found last night in a ditch near the Black River spillway in Onalaska. Police say foul play is not suspected. Alcohol and the weather are believed to be factors in her death. Frye was a marketing student at UW-La Crosse.