

Construction crews are setting the foundations for the CapX2020 project near Pine Island in Minnesota. It's all part of a project to add more than 700 new miles of transmission lines and strengthen the regional power grid. It hasn't been an easy project as a lot of arguing and public hearings were held up to this point.

\(Click for Audio\)

That was from a PSC meeting last summer. The plan has been years in the making, however it wasn't until Monday crews started making headway on the footings. The $1.9 billion project is expected to be complete by 2015. The main line to Alma is expected to be finished by next year.