

Some people just don't know how to say thank you. Or, it seems that way with a woman cops arrested on Friday night. They say she was calling 911 repeatedly, but wouldn't say what was wrong. When police got there, they found the woman, very drunk, locked out of her apartment. Boyfriend had the key, apparently. While dispatch worked to get a locksmith, the officer offered to have the woman sit in his warm car. That's when she started yelling and swearing and hit the cop's car. They say she caused some problems later on as well. That's when she was getting booked in at the jail.