

Unfairness in governor Walker's transportation budget plan? It might seem that way to those crunching the numbers on the $6.2 billion proposal from the governor. 13% of the total for all transportation infrastructure funding over the next two years is for just two projects in Milwaukee. But it seems like it goes that way more often than not, says Onalaska state rep, Steve Doyle

\(Click for Audio\)

Doyle calls for more road maintenance money and suggests the state find ways to collect more of that money from those from outside of the state who use the state's roadways.