

No, you haven't seen the fastest federal response during the gulf oil spill. But La Crosse congressman Ron Kind sees that changing. Although he cautions against feeling too much optimism about immediate results. He says, with a disaster of this magnitude, if resources are tossed at it indiscriminately, there's bound to be shortcomings in results. Kind says, although the clean-up is finally beginning to show progress, it's demoralizing to those involved when they know that ever more oil is spilling daily into the gulf.