

A new La Crosse city facility could get built with some settlement money. A city council committee has agreed to funding the construction of a new trailhead building for the top of Hixon Forest. 350 thousand dollars. The money would come from a fund of about four hundred thousand dollars that ballooned once the city settled with the Mississippi Valley Conservancy for financing irregularities in how the organization was using city money to conserve private land.