

Wisconsin Republicans approved new changes to Wisconsin's Hazardous Materials Response System last week which will result in an average 15% funding cut to teams in high-risk areas including Eau Claire and La Crosse. A bad move says State Senator, Jennifer Shilling.

\(Click for Audio\)

Shilling says businesses have said that they will likely be forced to purchase additional HazMat equipment and increase staff training at a significant cost if the current level of coverage is not maintained.