

What's republican Dan Kapanke been up to during his campaign for congress? The state senator says he's been traveling around the district talking with constituents. He's building a grass roots organization in nineteen counties. The republican says he's pretty excited about how much his support has grown over the course of his campaign. Kapanke is taking on incumbent democrat Ron Kind. Kapanke says there's plenty of differences between the two lawmakers. Dan says he would have voted against the health care bill and the stimulus package.
