

Fears about Madison overstepping? Nothing new for local governments. The latest example is a legislative proposal that would limit how municipalities like La Crosse could regulate water

\(Click for Audio\)

La Crosse city public works director Dale Hexom says, among many other worries, the bill contains unknowns about how the state would mandate how the city deals with stormwater.