

When a state is operating under federal mandates, it's often considered a good thing when the feds actually send money to pay for those mandates. Not in this case, insists Wisconsin state senator Frank Lasee. The republican wants the governor Walker administration to return $49 million in early implementation grants for the federal Affordable Health Care Act, most of that meant to set up health insurance exchanges

Lasee criticizes Walker for being the only republican governor not to return the federal grant money yet.
