

City Councilman Suggests Developing City Park Land

Friday, 02 December 2011 09:34 -

Does the city of La Crosse have enough park land? This week, city councilman jim Bloedorn suggested as much, saying that developing part of the experimental forest near Hixon Forest might be a better use for the land than permanently designating it as a city park

Although La Crosse has owned the experimental forest for nearly fifty years, it's never been officially designated as park land.