

A veto from La Crosse mayor Matt Harter in the last year was typically met by an override by the La Crosse city council.

No difference this year so far. The council has overturned the veto that mayor made last month on a special council measure that would have allowed the city to hire a single temporary replacement firefighter. The mayor vetoed the position because, as he said, the fire department is already overstaffed.