

Plane Making Company Moves To The Badger State

Monday, 16 January 2012 17:16 - Last Updated Monday, 16 January 2012 17:17

MADISON, Wis. (AP) A startup aircraft manufacturer says it will be locating its manufacturing facility and headquarters in Superior. Governor Scott Walker announced Monday that Kestrel Aircraft Corp. is expected to create 600 jobs. Kestrel's website says its headquarters and manufacturing is currently located in Brunswick, Maine. It also has engineering and design offices in Duluth, Minnesota. Walker's announcement of the project did not say how those existing locations and employees would be affected. Kestrel's website says it makes 6- and 8-person turboprop planes. The company is headed by Alan Klapmeier, co-founder and former chief executive officer of Duluth-based Cirrus Aircraft.