

There might be several referendum questions facing La Crosse voters when they go to the polls in April. Depends on whether the city council overrides mayor Matt Harter's vetoes of three advisory measures. One referendum for sure; a binding one on whether the city should have a city administrator. The council votes next month on cutting the mayor's salary in half if that gets approved. Harter says he'd rather not comment on the salary issue

Advisory referendum questions vetoed by the mayor involve billboards and city council size.
