

And then there was one.....for now. That's the latest count when looking at democratic challengers to the governor's post. Senator Tim Cullen of Janesville dropped out Wednesday.

He also said he cannot raise the $1 million to $2 million he believes is needed to deliver his message against other candidates with more resources and better name recognition. That leaves, for now, Kathleen Falk as the only declared candidate.