

It's not just the Lorax who speaks for the trees...

The city of Winona is working on plans to prevent the emerald ash borer from ruining the local tree population. Public works director Keith Nelson expects some ash trees to be removed over time, but he doesn't want them all to disappear. On Monday night, the Winona City Council will discuss plans for preserving ash trees, and for controlling the ash borer once it actually arrives in the city.