Wisconsin is adding jobs but many areas of the state are still showing increases in unemployment. That's the latest mixed news from the state in a jobs report. Several of the state's metro areas added hundreds of jobs in February. But all 12 of the metros had higher unemployment rates compared to January. Metro La Crosse unemployment increased from 6.2 percent to 6.4 percent, even while adding three hundred jobs. La Crosse county continues to have very low unemployment, second lowest in the state at six percent.
