

At this point, it would seem republicans in Wisconsin could watch with satisfaction while democrats grapple over who to back for governor. But La Crosse county republican party chair Julian Bradley says they've got more important stuff to do than focus on democratic infighting

Bradley insists, from a strategy standpoint, it won't matter to republicans who democrats select for a nominee in next month's recall primary election.