As a complaint against one public worker in La Crosse is filed with the state's Government Accountability Board, another get settled.

It's the complaint against school janitor Jeff Greene. Local tea party activist Dave Drewes had argued that Greene illegally used his school email to campaign for democrat Steve Doyle in a special assembly election last year. In an agreement with the board, Greene admits to wrongdoing and is fined a hundred dollars. Meanwhile, Drewes is part of the Tea Party group who has filed a complaint against county administrator Steve O'Malley for campaigning in his official capacity for the city administrator referendum this year.
