Five years in prison is the sentence given to a La Crosse man convicted of a stabbing last year at John's Bar.

Anquin St. Junious says he takes responsibility for stabbing and wounding a bartender at John's, apparently by accident, during a fight with another man. St. Junious admits to a drinking problem, and has made a plan for improving himself once he's out of prison. Judge Dale Pasell rejected a proposed two-year prison term, saying the victim could have died, and that St. Junious poses a danger to the public.
