

If republican lawmakers in Madison have their way, the secretary of state's office will become a little less important. Even while the current secretary is pushing for a little more relevancy. Secretary Doug La follette wants his office to become a one stop shop for businesses wanting to start or move to Wisconsin. He says, that's what's expected now

\(Click for Audio\)

The state senate this week passed a bill that would remove the office's authority to schedule publication of laws passed by the legislature and signed by the governor.