

Dozens of people in La Crosse gathered outside a house of God on Friday...concerned about religion, and government. The St. Joseph the Workman Cathedral was the scene of a Fortnight for Freedom rally, calling on Catholics to oppose federal laws and court rulings that might threaten their faith. Bishop William Callahan is worried about a possible Supreme Court ruling that could end the Defense of Marriage Act. Backers of the campaign also criticize the Obama health care act, which they say will force employers to cover forms of contraception, and perhaps abortion, that are contrary to Catholic teachings.