

La Crosse's Central High is now on an island. Part of the changes to high school basketball beginning in the coming school year. Creating five basketball divisions instead of four. Meaning Central will be the only D-1 team in the area. Central high activities director Joe Beran says the biggest change for the school is where it travels during tournament time. But not so much the amount of travel; either they'd be on the road to the east or, like next year, heading up north to play games. The new divisions mean Central is also one of the smallest Division one teams in the state.
