

Will La Crosse ever get its Bliss back? The way it's looking right now....no it won't. The city's public works department is looking for about 15 thousand dollars to get some design help for a fix for the latest washout on the troubled road that leads to the top for Grandad Bluff in the city. A city council committee has narrowly turned down the request. Which means that a repair of Bliss has an indefinite future. The road will remain closed at least until Spring. Without a plan for repair, it could remain closed permanently.