

An office in Madison that few know anything about. And Julian Bradley wants to change that. The republican from La Crosse faces off against Doug La Follette in this fall's secretary of state race. The office has been all but written off and is a constitutional amendment away from disappearing altogether. But Bradley says, that's not going to happen for at least the next four years. And in that time, he'll need something to do \(Click for Audio\) Bradley wants to streamline the office and modernize it while he looks for tasks for the office that go beyond keeper of the state's seal.
